In the style of “What’s the Deal”, a student in your class calls you over to show you something exciting that he has created. He has a really cool graph showing the number of students in your class who have different interests. He wants to know which interest has the most students and which has the least.

What do you say?

(Imagine you are in a classroom setting, and you need to teach the student how to analyze a graph.)